"SHOW ME
That Suit I Saw
In The Window"

It is in answer to this oft repeated request—asked of us many times each day—that we have prepared a remarkable exhibition of Spring and Summer Suits. A display of 162 different Morse-Made styles in our windows—and an exact duplication of each suit inside, so that when you say "show me that suit I saw in the window" we'll be able to do so instantly.

It will be the largest single display of men's clothing Greater Boston has ever witnessed! Every inch of our three hundred and fifty feet of window space will be utilized.

This showing will not only impress you with the wide range of styles manufactured by Leopold Mors Company, but it will also serve to show you the immensity of the institution back of Mors Men's Clothing.

Every suit will bear a price tag—look for it—for Morse-Made Clothes are not high priced clothes.

They are Clothes of the highest type, made from selected materials, carefully tailored and designed to meet the requirements of the conservative and staid business man and the more progressive ideal of the younger man.

Prices range from

The Power Of Ready Cash

A maker of fine suits needed ready cash—on account of a rainy April and a very backward season, he had 347 suits on hand for which he had no customers. He was willing to make a tremendous sacrifice in order to turn them into ready cash. We offered him about one-half their real value—11.00—and he said, "We've got the suits, and we'll have a sale that will be the talk of Boston by Saturday night."

'PRODUCE CONSUL SILLIMAN WITHIN 12 HOURS,' ULTIMATUM TO HUERTAS

American Marines in action in front of the Customs House at Vera Cruz. Machine guns, rifles and automatic pistols are being used to "snipe" Mexican "snipers" on nearby housetops. A field piece has been wheeled into position to shell their hiding place.

DEATH OF HAGGERTY DESCRIBED BY WOMAN

Mrs. Mary M. Gurney of No. 19, Newbury street, Brockton, a Vera Cruz refugee, who has just reached home, tells this absorbing story of the capture of Vera Cruz and the death of Corporal Daniel Haggerty of Cambridge.

"We left Mexico City April 26. I did not anticipate any trouble, though we knew of the salient controversy. My son, Motie, who is still in Mexico City, insisted that I had better go. We boarded the night train to Vera Cruz and arrived the next morning, unharmed.

"We drove in a carriage to the Hotel Mexico, but the manager refused to admit us, warning us the city was to be bombarded in an hour.

In the street. Then field guns and machine guns began to arrive, and about fifteen minutes after the first shots were fired by the Mexicans, the Americans gave answer. Discipline was perfect and we saw the marines drive ahead into the heart of the city. The waterfront was left deserted save for a guard here and there.

"We heard the shooting all day; and at last, at mid-afternoon, white flags began to appear throughout the city. But the snipers were still at work and we could hear the crack of rifles and an occasional blast of volley-firing by the marines.

"A man came aboard and told of a Mexican named Martinez whose wife is an American. She went into the street to find out what was going on while he hid behind a window in his house and shot at the Americans. He was eventually killed.

"There were snipers on top of the Hotel Mexico and the guns of the Cheever filled the hotel. The shooting was perfect.

WOMAN HELD HAGGERTY.

"It was in front of the Hotel Villalones that Corporal Haggerty fell. A friend of mine, a newly married woman, Mrs. Joseph Wheeler, held him in her arms and tended him till he died.

"We could see, from the liner, the snipers waving their messages from the shore to the ships. These snipers were posted in conspicuous places, either on house tops or on balconies. They were fine targets for snipers, but I saw none fall.

"There was some firing all night. Later we saw Charge O'Shaughnessy arrive and go aboard the Florida, and we saw the war airplanes at work over the city. Then we left for New Orleans and home."

PEN PICTURES OF THE MEDIATORS FOR PEACE

WASHINGTON, May 7.—John Barlowing authoritative sketches of the rest, Director General of the Pan-American Union, furnishes the fol-low's troubles through the exercise of their good offices.

Dr. Domínguez da Gama, the Ambassador of Brazil, is the successor of the late João Nabuco, who accomplished so much to increase the friendship between his country and the United States, to which he was accredited. He is from the State of Rio de Janeiro, where he began his professional life as a journalist. In 1887 and 1888 he was Paris correspondent of the Diário da Noite, and wrote brilliantly to other Brazilian and foreign periodicals, his essays appearing in book form. In 1892 he was appointed secretary to Brazil's special commission to Washington, where President Cleveland received him in a dispute between Brazil and Argentina. From 1896 to 1900 he was connected with special missions in Europe. In 1901 he was made Chargé d'Affaires at Brussels. In 1903 he assisted in the negotiations that led to the purchase of Brazil of the Acre Territory. In 1907 he was Brazilian Minister to Peru, and in 1908 he was transferred to Argentina, and while there was Vice-President of the Fourth Pan-American Conference. In 1909 he represented his government at the Independence celebration in Chile. In June, 1911, Ambassador da Gama was transferred to the United States.

Dr. Rómulo S. Naón, the Minister of Argentina, was first recognized in public life when he won a gold medal at the University of Buenos Ayres by an able thesis on a matter of great interest to his native country. In 1898 he was appointed official secretary to Bernardino de Irigoyen, Governor of the Province of Buenos Ayres. In 1902 he was elected to the lower house of the National Congress, and also in 1904, distinguishing himself throughout as an able debater, and as a complete master of public affairs. When President Alvear assumed office he appointed Dr. Naón Secretary of Justice and Public Instruction, because of his public service and because he had already been professor of civics in the National College and of international law in the University of Buenos Ayres. While Secretary of Public Instruction he founded schools of secondary instruction in the interior of his country, the first industrial school for laborers, and established normal schools in the national territories, as well as a superior normal school and a university preparatory institute in the capital. An Secretary he was noted for his high ideals, executive ability and capacity for hard work. He was appointed Minister of Argentina in Washington in April, 1911.

EDUARDO SUAREZ SUÑER is a native of Santiago, the capital of Chile, and studied law at the National University there. Very soon after obtaining his degree he received a responsible post in the office of the Minister of Foreign Affairs, and soon afterwards with diplomatic life he had numerous intricate international problems to handle, which he carried to a very successful conclusion. Devoting himself then for some time to his profession, he advanced rapidly therein, but was called by his fellow citizens to become the Intendente of the Province of Atacama, which he later represented in the National Congress. In 1905 the late President Montt gave him the portfolio of Justice and Public Instruction, and while discharging the duties of these offices he presided over the Pan-American Scientific Congress in December, 1906.
